

INTRO TO "X MINUS ONE"

Our final program this evening is one that was quite popular with science-fiction fans from 1955 till 1958- and was yet another offering from NBC. X Minus One was, in fact, initially a revival of the space-aged series Dimension X, and a couple of years ago we here at "Lend Me an Ear" recreated one of those shows. Often the scripts from its predecessor would be re-used on X Minus One, but nevertheless, the anthology series adapted some of the best stories from Galaxy Magazine and had authors ranging from Isaac Asimov to Ray Bradbury to Robert A. Heinlein on the payroll.

Tonight's rendering is from a story by William Tenn who also wrote such pieces as "Down Among the Dead Men", "The Liberation of Earth", "Time in Advance", and "On Venus, Have We Got a Rabbi". From a broadcast on February 6, 1957..... here is"Venus Is A Man's World".
